

Why gather information?

Knowing why students behave in certain ways will help you predict and prevent problem behaviours.

It provides a basis for planning how to teach alternative ways of behaving, so that students can get their needs met in socially acceptable ways.

Gather information to:

- better understand what a student is communicating through their behaviour about the difficulties they are having with particular tasks, situations, or expectations
- identify activities, expectations, and teacher or peer actions that might be triggering the behaviour
- think about how the learning environment, including responses from teachers and peers, might be reinforcing the behaviour
- think about the function of the behaviour (that is, what purpose it is serving)
- think about how the wider learning or social environment might be providing the conditions for disengaged or antisocial behaviour.

This information was downloaded/printed from the Ministry of Education's website "Inclusive Education". Except where otherwise noted it is Crown Copyright 2018.

Information on the Inclusive Education website is regularly updated so we recommend you check the website version of this information to ensure it remains current.

