

Develop an inclusive local curriculum

The New Zealand curriculum is non-prescriptive. Its flexibility allows schools to develop their curriculum as they notice, recognise, and respond to the needs of all their learners and their community.

Te Mātaiaho, the New Zealand curriculum mandates that schools move away from a one-size-fits-all paradigm towards the inclusive design of teaching and learning, where ALL students can expect to:

- connect their culture, experiences and interests to their learning
- learn in flexible environments with adjustable materials they can personalise to meet their learning needs and preferences
- engage in ongoing, timely conversations about their learning with teachers and peers
- access learning opportunities, experiences and environments alongside their peers
- be supported to advocate for their own needs and lead their own learning
- share their thinking and learning in ways that demonstrate their understanding.

This information was downloaded/printed from the Ministry of Education's website "Inclusive Education". Except where otherwise noted it is Crown Copyright 2018.

Information on the Inclusive Education website is regularly updated so we recommend you check the website version of this information to ensure it remains current.
