Make learning visible

Provide opportunities for parents to see what learning looks like and engage them early in the process.

- Plan open evenings and walk-throughs.
- Create an online space, such as a blog or a page on your school website, which is frequently updated with information, images, and video explaining your ILE.
- Provide multiple opportunities for parents and the community to discuss, ask questions, observe, experience, and explore ideas.
- Provide multiple ways for parents to ask questions (for example, emails, surveys, blog comments, and face-to-face meetings).
- Provide opportunities for parents to see how ILEs work in other schools. Invite other schools in to share their practice, share videos, and research.
- Provide opportunities for parents to learn about and use new technologies.
- Share examples of timetables and ask for parent feedback.
- Explain the physical organisation of the school – focusing specifically on how learners with diverse needs are planned for and supported.
- Explain the layout of classroom spaces and how these cater for the differing needs of students.
