

Support unstructured time

Unstructured times, such as lunchtimes, can create stress for some students.

Consider:

- having a small choice of organised activities for students to participate in at break times
- providing buddies to model and mediate (if necessary) interactions during break times
- ensuring that students know where to go to find the duty teacher or peer mediators when they are concerned or need some help
- how to make all staff aware of the support individual students may need and how to provide it most effectively
- outlining the school boundaries and the school rules regularly
- providing alternative break times for junior and senior syndicates in larger schools.

This information was downloaded/printed from the Ministry of Education's website "Inclusive Education". Except where otherwise noted it is Crown Copyright 2018.

Information on the Inclusive Education website is regularly updated so we recommend you check the website version of this information to ensure it remains current.
